Public Speaking

JAMES A. WINANS
Professor of Public Speaking in Cornell University

"I have finished reading your book with especial care, going over parts of it more than once, and have greatly enjoyed it. . . . I do not know of any book which seems to me, for practical purposes, as good."—ANDREW D. WHITE.

"Professor Winans has made a large study of the best writers on psychology and rhetoric and oratory. . . . And he knows men and the practical questions of life. The book is a fine combination of keen thought, common sense, and idealism. . . ."—ARTHUR S. HOYT, Professor of Practical Theology, in the Auburn Seminary Record.

"The book is invaluable for that unfortunate class of men whose duties include a certain amount of public speaking for which they have had no training, except in the unsatisfactory school of experience."—CUTHBERT W. POUND, of the New York State Court of Appeals.

AMERICAN PROSE

Selected and Edited with Illustrative and Explanatory Notes and a Bibliography

By WALTER C. BRONSON, Professor of English Literature, Brown University

Companion Volume to American Poems

This volume of representative selections from the prose literature of our country will quickly take its place as a standard work for classroom use, as well as for private reading. Clear and attractive in typography, American Prose contains a fund of exceedingly interesting material, the selections covering the writings of authors from the settlement of Jamestown to the end of the Civil War.

The editor has followed the modern tendency in books of selections, toward including fewer authors and giving more space to each. He has selected material which is specially adapted for careful study in class. Most teachers will welcome the abundance of selections from such authors as Poe, Emerson, and Hawthorne, which illustrate the different phases of their work far better than one story or one essay could. The three orations by Calhoun, Webster, and Lincoln will also prove valuable for reading or classroom work: they have a kind of unity, all dealing with the big question of slavery and the Union, yet from different points of view.

Stone and Garrison's Essentials of Argument

By ARTHUR P. STONE, Instructor in English in Harvard University and STEWART L. GARRISON, Instructor in English and Public Speaking in Worcester Academy.

The basic principle of this class textbook is that argument is not a hybrid or freak form of composition in which analysis, evidence, and reasoning are the only things to be considered. There are chapters on the qualities of style with some attempt to apply the principles specifically to argument.

A chapter on Delivery and one on Debating are not theoretical but embody the practical results of the senior author, who gives the courses in argument at Harvard, is a judge and lawyer in active practice, and is in charge of the Advisory Committee at Harvard which has practical control of all the debating activities of the university.

The book includes all the subjects of the triangular debates between Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, and gives a specimen brief and argument with the authors' comments and criticism in detail.

Lewis and Hosic's Practical English for High Schools

By WILLIAM D. LEWIS, Principal William Penn High School for Girls, Philadelphia, and JAMES FLEMING HOSIC, Managing Editor, The English Journal, Secretary of National Council of Teachers of English, Head of Department of English, Chicago Normal College, Chicago. Cloth, 12mo, 350 pp. approximately. Price $1.00.

THIS book attempts to teach the old subject of English composition in a way that is more informal and interesting than is customary. There is a liveliness of tone to the presentation which is well calculated to appeal to the pupil and spur him on to do the work presented. Each topic begins with illustrative selections, many of them from student themes, and from these suggestive questions bring out the most important principles, which in their turn are made the basis of exercises to be performed by the pupil. There is an absence of formal and formidable rules.

Throughout the work it is the practical side that receives the chief emphasis. The pupil is given a working knowledge of modern business methods. Besides being drilled thoroughly in those fundamental principles that are common to all kinds of good English, his attention is devoted to the use of cards for filing and outlining, the study of business reports, business letters, proof reading, and newspaper writing. An attempt is also made to teach the pupil how to criticize and correct his own work, and how to make correct recitations. A brief review of the essentials of grammar is included.
